the richest lead merchant in America. The approach of death caused inquiries which resulted in obtaining the heretofore unknown story of his sudden descent to pover the s that Corwith's every move in speculation was being "coppered" with his own capital by his own son, Gurdon Corwith, and that before the inevitable crash came $1,100.000 had don Corwith, and that before the inevitable crash came $1,10000 had been drawn from the old man's coffers and sunk in the operations in which the younger Corwith had become hopelessly involved Young Corwith was at the time a metal broker of New York and induced his father to believe he had exclusive information in regard to the plans of the French copper syndicate as to lead. The father was in poor health and allowed his son unusual leeway until the actual collapse was reached. Corwith believed he had an paid for, when the fact was that the lead purchased had been sold and the proceeds entirety wiped out by young Corwith was placed in confinement for a time, but afterwards released, and his father shouldered the loss, making whatever settlement was possible.

He says: "I have so disciplined my mind and body that I can take upon myself, at vol tion, a trance state, and while in that condition I propose to be buried, just as a dead person is ordinarily buried, in a secure, regularly made coffin, placed in a grave five feet deep, which will be filled up and the earth compactly put in and mounded over. I shall remain there four weeks, then be disinterred, resuscitated and fully restored to the full vigor and strength of my normal condition. This is not impossible; it is no new thing." Dr.

Similar cases have been possible to doubt their genuineness. If we cannot explain those cases, we can find a host of analagous facts in the lower animal life, as, for instance, the hibernation.

Portland, Oregon, July 31.

While I was in Tillamook last winter I was affected in my back and kidneys so that it was almost impossible for me to reach Portland. When I got here I was induced to try the Oregon Kidney Tea. I drank at my meals, the tea made from it, and it has effected a radical cure. I can highly recommend it to all who were articled as I was.
